Our Yacht Club Paris Bastille barbecues just keep getting better. They are held once a month, and they draw a loyal crowd of regulars who live in the port, and an ever changing group of boaters who are either staying for six months during the winter or just passing through Paris for a week or two in the summer. The fact that our neighborhood is constantly changing means that there are always new neighbors to meet and new friendships to make. Last night a brass band called Les Gueules en Pente came to add a little spice to our barbecue.